Annual Report
2014

Etta, owner of Etta's Taste of the Town in Fort Ashby, Mineral County, WV. Fort Ashby holds the last standing outpost built under General George Washington in 1755. The Fort is responsible for the town's inclusion on the American Discovery Trail. The town also hosts a gun bash and the Mineral County fair.

An open letter

The idea is that we are all learning. We are all learning together.

Our community is wider, broader, and deeper than any of us can imagine; and people of all creative and passionate types hide out in all sorts of hollows. We do not, as no one truly can, know every person, place or situation of our area: this region of eight counties unified by a spine of mountains running through the highlands of West Virginia and Maryland.

These are eight counties of hills and valleys, crossing state lines and more or less contiguous. There really is no other reason to group these counties – Barbour, Garrett, Grant, Mineral, Pocahontas, Preston Randolph, Tucker – together but for the Tucker Community Foundation. On the ground, the actual earth, is no physical evidence of this link that crosses communities, mountains, and state boundaries with equal aplomb. In reality, it is not the land that connects, but little points of life: towns, yes, but more importantly, specific individuals.

In the past, we have tried to draw parallels with shared landscapes, endeavors, and heritage, but what really is the link, extant and future, is the individual human beings who endeavor to help one another. It is for that reason that this year we have decided to present a portrait of a community: an impression in words and photographs. So that we may learn together.

It is a way for us to share what the Tucker Community Foundation does in print and in person. Beyond that, it is a way to better learn who and what we really are. So we look to the corners of our service area, a long, slow ride on twisted roads away from the namesake county where our Foundation began. We go looking for stories. We endeavor to unearth characters, human and landscape, with experiences we can share, inspire, and connect in ways that mean something.

This field journal is dedicated . . .

To the springfolk, people who could – though probably wouldn't – say, We are water. We are made of this place. We are this place in human form. And, like this water that emerges from the hills, we are unfiltered, untested, and potentially dangerous.

To those around who likely will not have the opportunity to read this; who, if they did, might not believe that we care. But we do.

To the startling first chill splatter of rain; the gasp of wind before the thunderous rain drums our position into pointillistic perspective; the darkened downpour that gurgles the ground upwards; that feels like hiding the earth.

To the many we will never know. You are we are I.

A note on the production of this field journal:

The words were recorded, to the best of our ability, as they were said and presented without interpretation. These are not biographies, but rather thin sections of lives lived. Interpret them as you see fit.

OUR MISSION

Creating opportunities for the communities we serve.

DIRECTOR, FRIENDS OF THE CHEAT, KINGWOOD, WV

So I was coming up to West Virginia...I'm from just south of Erie, P.A., but I was livin' in the hills in southwest Virginia teaching at a boarding school. I had lived in rural places before, but travelling here and spending time in Preston County was almost like this little fairy tale. You know? And coming throughout that year, the Cheat being undammed, every time I came the river looked so different! So that was really fascinating to me. We would make that drive and everytime it was like I was seeing a new place. So I really, I don't know, I really connected with it.

It's the people: the stories you tell, the people you meet. The work we do isn't glamorous and it's rough. I mean: acid mine-drainage never stops; it's expensive; it doesn't have direct human health impacts, so people don't necessarily get too wound up about it; there are not a lot of resources for it. But it's so rewarding because of the tangible difference you do get to make in people's lives. Preston County is a small community. I mean the whole watershed is a small community. And we have just started doing more work in Tucker County in the Parsons area with the Water Trail, which is great to meet new people and expand the river access angle of what we do. Because if we don't get people to the river, we can't connect and make it personal.

Yeah, we all drink the water, but I still think there is a big disconnect here in West Virginia between human health and water quality. But people love fishing and they love paddling so we have been more focused on stewardship grown from recreation as opposed to kinda the human health angle of water quality. But it's all connected. Everything is connected.

When I was substituting at Rowlesburg School, I was just shocked at how many kids had never been in a boat! I'm like, 'You guys live right on the river! You've never been in a canoe?! You've never been in a boat?' 'No, my mom won't let me go down to the river.' You know, and a lot of it has to do with just those memories of the '85 flood. I mean, the footage and the photographs are unbelievable! To look at how things change and how rocks move. I don't know if you drove along 72. There's that one rock, well by Fascination Alley where Jimmy does his squirt boating, there's this one big rock that shoots up over the guardrail, it's the only rock the whole way. That rock wasn't even there before the flood, just imagine the power of that river. It's scarred people in different ways – in deep ways. So that's been a bit of a hurdle as far as like getting local people engaged in paddling and events on the water. But I think we're making a difference and it starts with the kids– it's starts with the young people. For many years Friends of the Cheat was focused mainly on whitewater access because a lot of our support came from whitewater paddlers. So we wanted to serve them. A lot of our own core group were whitewater paddlers. But with the Water Trail now, I mean, that's for everybody. I mean that's grandpa, grandma can go out and drop a line, can take the dog, you can take the kids, you can float it in tubes. We're hopeful that that aspect of paddling locally continues to grow.

The work we do with Acid Mine Drainage: we're building treatment systems. And we're building treatment systems voluntarily on people's property that have footprints of two, three, four, five, eight acres. We don't pay them anything. We can't compensate them. So that's the harder sell. Because we're actually, you know we're not asking you to just care. [Laughs. A breathy thing] We're asking you to contribute and be engaged in a really direct way. And people are worried about liability. They're worried about paying taxes and property values. But we've got sixteen treatment systems installed on, gosh, fifty different land-owners' properties removing thousands of tons of pollutants from the river every year.

And as long as we keep doing good work, we keep working cooperatively with people, and don't screw anything up too badly, you know? Then we've got neighbors telling neighbors, 'Well, yeah, they were cooperative and they fixed my road and put that culvert in for me.' Ehhh, we can do little things like that. And that's primarily what Kevin works on are the abandoned mine land projects.

And that job will never run out of work. We're doing more with the forfeited mines, I point over here 'cause that's Owen and the Left-Side Crew. So they're actually maintaining twenty-seven treatment sites that the State runs. So that's moving parts and active chemicals. Going there every day. I mean that's time-sensitive.

Treating Acid mine-drainage is intensive. You can't just set it and forget it. You gotta be out there lookin' at it and we're happy that we've built our reputation up enough that we're basically contracted by the State to do – I mean instead of hiring a consultant company they hired us. Not only are we cheaper, but we don't answer to the bottom line. Our mission is to care for the river.

I have come to be more comfortable with just the day-to-day, just what's going on, just juggling the balls. But alright, what about five years? Ten years? Like where do we want to be? Like that's where I'm at now. And then also thinking about: can I do this forever? And what kind of things do I want to accomplish and leave as my personal legacy? You know, that's one thing that I'd like to learn more from TCF is about endowments and long-term funding because we have all these treatment systems that we have, they will need maintenance for ever and ever and ever.

And, you know, we've got some money in the bank, but we don't have any long-term investments – we don't pursue estates or wills. I mean we could do all of those things. And that's kinda what I see as the next chapter. I mean, okay: we're doing this work; we're doing a good job; people know about us; we're able to raise this money to operate at this level and we don't need to do a whole lot more, but how do we cement in our ability to keep doing this? And, uh, there aren't deep pockets around here. So we gotta look to the outside sources, other foundations, this generation of paddlers getting much older who have had successful careers doing things all over the world.

I've got all these dreams: collaborate; connect the community through art; curated art shows about the river; turning the Fest site into a sculpture park and edible forest and all the cool stuff we could do down there. I mean there's no shortage of ideas and opportunities.

It's just trying to catch them as they fly by and get 'em off the ground.

CEO, DAVIS MEDICAL CENTER, ELKINS, WV

West Virginia. Ritchie County. Lived in Clarksburg for 26 years and then been in Elkins since 2001. Started here in 1998. So I started three years before we actually moved to Elkins.

I worked in healthcare as a consultant, as a certified public accountant. And I did that for a lot of years, primarily working in healthcare. And then had the opportunity to become a chief operation officer and then there was a opportunity for the CEO position and I applied for that position. So as opposed to somebody who worked directly for a health care facility for many years, I did consulting for health care facilities and then, had the opportunity to step up to this position. There are traditional and there are non-traditional ways to get there. If you'd asked me twenty years ago if this was where I'd end up, no, it was not.

Davis Memorial Hospital itself was started in nineteen and three. The Davis family set aside a small amount of money, a large amount of money at that time, around $30,000, for the benefit of the hospital. And that fund has been held in trust all these years. The income from that fund has been given back to the hospital to use for patient care services. So that money has been held locally for many, many years. I think the intention was that it was given to the Davis Health System Foundation and the Foundation then looked at the Tucker Community Foundation and said, that seems like the perfect place to park that money. The intent there is that that endowment will grow and, at the same time, income from that endowment will come back to the benefit of, it's now, the Davis Medical Center as opposed to Davis Memorial Hospital.

The second fund out here is that we have something called the Davis House. And the Davis House was established because we have cancer care patients who come to the cancer center. They may come from a distance to be here. Because the nature of cancer treatment, often you have to be treated five days in a row. And so it is a hardship on some families to travel an hour, hour and a half, sometimes two hours – one-way – on a daily basis to come to Elkins to have a treatment and then to go back home. So the Davis House was established for the benefit of those families so that they could come to Elkins, be here for the week, receive their treatments, and go home at the end of the week, and not have both the personal hardship of all the travel plus the financial hardship of that travel. Part of establishing the Davis House was to set up an endowment that would then provide funding to pay the utilities; the cost of operating the Davis House.

Davis Health System Foundation has the ability to raise money, but they really don't have the structure at this point in time to hold endowment funds, allow them to grow, that the Tucker Community Foundation has in place. And so this was a nice partnership between the two foundations. That they were able to take around $200,000 of that endowment money to help pay for the expenses of the Davis House, place that within the Tucker Community Foundation and they will hold those monies and continue to invest those monies and allow that investment to grow. At the same time, take income from that money and give it back to the Davis Foundation to use to pay the expenses of the Davis House. It's been a very good partnership between the two foundations, each allowing them to do their own purpose out here and seems to be working very well.

Is that kinda what you're looking for?

I ramble.

Food & Farm

Since the launch of Potomac Highlands Food and Farm Initiative (PHFFI) in 2013, community support continues to build.

“Over the last two years PHFFI has emerged to have a tremendous impact on the local farm and food economy in their region. Their Highland Market local foods grocery store has been extremely successful in terms of the revenue generated for local producers and the demand it has generated for local foods. Many of the producers VC2 works with are looking to the Highland Market as one of their main and strongest market outlets – a sign of a successful effort with both local customers and producer support.”

RUTH MARY OLDHAM
REGIONAL COORDINATOR
VALUE CHAIN CLUSTER INITIATIVE (VC2)

LOCAL FARM ECONOMY

In 2014, producers to Highland Market grew by 30%. With more than 60 producers now supplying the market, area farmers are experiencing increased economic sustainability from sales generated in the off season. The goal is to engage more producers and continue to increase inventory.

Ongoing Food & Farm Workshops are providing residents, 2nd home owners and visitors with enthusiasm for cooking, nutrition, farming and food preservation an opportunity to share their knowledge and passion. The workshops draw instructors and students from throughout the region including Tucker, Preston, Barbour, Randolph, Pocahontas, Upshur and Garrett County, MD.

WHAT'S AHEAD?

The demand for locally sourced, value-added meals became apparent in September 2014, after a compressor on one of our freezers failed. Staff emptied the freezer, thawed the contents and added other in-stock inventory, transforming the goods into ready-to-eat meals that quickly sold out. PHFFI hopes to meet that demand by adding a Certified Kitchen.

OUR MISSION

TO INCREASE ACCESS TO QUALITY LOCAL FOOD AND FARM PRODUCTS.

2014: A LOOK AT THE NUMBERS

PHFFI is an economic development project of Tucker Community Foundation.

$ 131,000	Highland Market food and farm product purchases; the bulk of that paid to producers in our region
55,000	PHFFI salaries and benefits paid to employees
67,000	Grant support and donations from the general public
<hr/>
$ 253,000	Total Economic Impact

“PHFFI has been an excellent partner in building up our local food economy and a leading catalyst for increased production in the region – I say this as one such grower.”

Run For It

Just like the Tucker Community Foundation is not your typical foundation, the Run For It is not your typical race. Moreso in this race than any other, Run For It event rewards teamwork, team spirit, and collaboration towards a common goal.

With that in mind, the Foundation has expanded the award categories to try to spread the wealth more widely, each year offering more and more prize money for expanded award categories. And as the race gains momentum, more race sponsors, local businesses, along with local governments contribute money.

Until 2012, only the Tucker County Commission saw enough potential in the race to contribute money, the basis for the Tucker County Commission Awards. In 2013, three more county commissions – Barbour, Randolph, and Garrett – joined in. Last year, Preston County Commission stepped in to help as well. This is a case of the Foundation slowly building a successful event that has reached the critical mass to garner the attention of surrounding counties.

With five counties now on board, the Foundation has the participation of more than half of the counties it serves. It remains to be seen when the three remaining counties – Mineral, Grant, and Pocahontas – will see this potential resource for their community causes. At this point, however, it does seem inevitable. The Run For It races onward.

This is such a great event for groups that don't have the capacity that we do to do their own fundraising. It's so smart and creative and I just love it.

And that is why I will forever go to the County Commission's meetings and stand behind Diane and say, 'There are needs. You guys don't want to deal with granting money. You don't want to deal with deciding. Don't decide! Let 'em run for it.'

Boulder Park

Developing a successful project requires a great deal of preparation. Creative input, strong partnerships, community support, and an engaged public helped build momentum for the Boulder Park project through 2014. At year end, donors had contributed more than $60,000 meeting the match requirement for multiple grant programs and helping to build an endowment for Tucker County EMS. The fundraising effort continues as we strive to meet the match requirement for subsequent grants. The climb continues.

Successful communities work for the common good and share a vision for the future. The Foundation recognizes the tremendous effort of those who are involved with the planning and implementation of the Boulder Park project.

CYCLIST, CANAAN VALLEY, WV

I think it'll be perfect really, 'cause you'll have that quick, hey let's go out to the Boulder Park for an evening, you know a little evening spin out there with the kids. Yeah, so I think that'll fit in perfect. The thing that's cool about the bike path and the Boulder Park is that I don't think the hardcores will use it as much as just everyday people and tourists and stuff. And so that it's for everybody. Which is cool.

I think that's like the thing with Davis is it should be a recreational trailhead. A trail right there in town is the great thing about Davis, you know: park your car, go skiing, go running, go doggy-walkin', go bikin', you know, walk to the Falls, whatever you want to do, you can do it right from town. So I think that's their strong point. And now with a Boulder Park and a little bike path it's just gonna set this up to be that recreational destination. If we're not already.

That's gonna be interesting to see, really. You know, The Highway...oh which the bike path is gonna lead out to, a lot of people have this idea that the highway is gonna bring a lot of better economics cause more people will be able to get here. Then maybe more businesses will be able to sustain themselves or pop up. I think people are really tied into this idea that the highway is gonna help real estate. But, you know, higher real estate prices mean higher rent too and higher taxes and everything. So yeah, I think it's gonna be really interesting to see what the highway brings.

I mean, it's still hard to get a job around here. It really is. If I was in Asheville or in Knoxville, you know those are all a lot bigger towns, but like I could maybe have a decent job in the outdoor industry, somehow. That's what I'm lookin' for with the highway, maybe there will be that little outdoor manufacturer or company or something that can employ people with the lifestyle that they want: the healthy lifestyle, outdoor lifestyle, but that it's a decent job, basically: some place to work AT. Does that make sense? When I first moved back here: oh my god, the potential is amazing.

Like whatever you want to do, you could do because it hasn't been done yet here.

Luke Fleischman

ON CARVING OUT A HOME IN DAVIS, WV

We've always just sorta nickel-and-dimed our projects. You know, we've never had a mortgage because the places we've bought, you couldn't go to a bank and get a mortgage.

You can hire a designer or an architect or someone and they come up with a beautiful plan, but it rarely is the plan that you would ultimately would want to live with. You know, it made sense for somebody's vision, but it doesn't match yours. It's kinda all for naught. I equate it to – I think designers and landscape designers figured this out over the years with like a college campus or a business park or something: First, before you put in fancy sidewalks everywhere you pay attention to where people are actually walking. Campuses are a classic example: they create a beautiful square and they have walks that go here and here, but within months, students start going HERE. You know, they make their own trail.

And if people really paid attention – if planners and designers spent time in that school or on that campus before they drew out these things they'd say, you know what, kids like to go from this point to that point, that's where we need to do a walkway.

I think that's the way, that's the way you begin carving out your home is you start – you don't do this turnkey operation and then come in, you know, six months later to this pristine house. I think you live in it a little bit and go, you know what, I don't like havin' the shower right here, I think I'd like to... and then the more you kinda rough it and live in this primitive place you figure out where the flow is gonna go. Or you might say, I'm not gonna put a door there, I might bring it back here so that this becomes...

And you only learn that when you're hanging out in here sittin' on joint compound buckets and eatin' dinner, you know?

81 YEAR-OLD TIMBER CUTTER, BARBOUR COUNTY, WV

Okay you gonna watch me cut that tree? Okay. Uh, let's see. Imma go back here. Boy that's a big one! Hehh-HAH! Okay. See that line? Up in there? I gotta clear cut this from here down. Then up in here I'm gonna get the biggest ones out. Where's your dog at this morning? At home? Ha-HAH! Okay... (groan) I gotta get me – that saw there's pretty heavy. They got one a little smaller. My brother sells these, so he tried to get me – I bought one here three, four years ago. I said, 'Ah, I don't like 'em.' But, I tell you what: they's a good saw. [cranks once on the saw. Clack, pubbub. Clack, pubbubbub. Clack.] So that's – I tore that muscle in my arm. And boy – Hehhh! It kinda gives me a fit down there.

I fell one time and I felt something give. So I went to the doctor, I said, I think I tore a muscle in my arm. And he done whatever, said oh, said ain't nothing wrong with it. So that's been three years ago and I went back to him a couple more times and he said there's nothing wrong with it. Then finally about two years or better I went back, said yeah well you got a tore muscle. I said yeah I tried to tell you when I was in here and so he left it go too long. Now they can't do nothing with it.

Right there's a good saw. It's not real heavy. That other one's pretty heavy: a lot heavier than that one. Now that there's a good saw, but they quit makin' em. They went to this right here and I can't hardly get this one started with my arms like 'at. There's a boy stopped here the other day, wanted to know if I needed any help. I said, Yeah, I need help, but I can't work nobody...cause my liability insurance don't cover it. I gotta work by myself.

Right, Imma go up there for awhile. I want to skid in today while it's dry. I think it's supposed to start getting' bad here Monday. Then I'll just come here and cut them up. Yeah, while it's a little bit dry I wanna try to get as much in as I can. I gotta get toughened-in! My legs is not strengthened, but I'm getting' there though! Ha ha ha!

O, there's a lotta work to this. I'm mean you see what I had to go through to get one skidded. I usually get about three skids a day. Yeah, about three. Takes a couple hours: onetwothree, six. Sometimes I'll make four. Boy, that there is a lot bigger than I thought it was. Going up and down that skidder gets me! See, I had both my knees replaced. Now I get along pretty good with 'em. Friend of mine had his done and he never took them exercises and he can hardly get up and down off the chair. I took them exercises. I made sure I took 'em. Okay.

I could notice myself in the last five years, 'course I'll be 82 here July 14th, so it's about time to give it up. I gotta take my logger's license – runs out in July – and I gotta go take it. And I told that guy last year, I said, you not gonna see me next year. H'said, I wouldn't bet on it. Boy, I'd a walkup cause he's gonna get on me! Ha ha ha! A hundred and fifty dollars I pay to do that. Then, uh, fourteen hundred dollars for my liability insurance. So you gotta cut about five loads before, you see, you get outta the red.

I got probably about two loads in 'ere now.

[Edna, Dominick's wife, yelling so he can hear] HE WANTS TO HEAR THE STORY ABOUT WHEN YOU WAS HATCHED!

I only weighed like two and a half pounds, I think. And they thought I was gonna die cause I fooled 'em. But my twin brother, I think he weighed three pounds. Fio. They didn't rhyme. His name was Fio and mine was Dominick. F-I-O-R-I. Fiori. That's like in Italian fiori! And so, they layed us on the oven door to keep us warm cause she had everybody at home, she didn't ever have nobody at a hospital. That's the reason why I say they had the oven too hot, they got me a little bit dark! HA HA! That's what I tell everybody! Ha ha!

Well, Dad, he made money on the farm. He did it all with horses, cause he had no tractor. I mean, we used to raise like a thousand bushels of potatoes and about that much corn every year. You can imagine how much work we had to hoe by hand. We just took a field, oh I'd say about twenty acres or at least that and he would plant his potatoes in different places. Potatoes do better that way. Yeah, you can't plant potatoes every year in one place. They won't get as big.

I got in a lot of trouble on the farm. We was out there hoin', I think they was fourteen of us – all my sisters, they'd be out there hoin' – we took maybe ten or eleven or twelve rows at one time. And so, we was out there hoin' and I said, I'd know how I'm gonna get out of hoin': so I broke my hoe. Well, my dad gave me a sister's hoe. I said, well I'll fix that: so I broke that hoe too. And you know what he done? He put me on my hands and knees. I dug the weeds out! I didn't break no more hoes! Ha ha!

I used to go after cows real early in the morning. So...I would ride 'em! I'd get on and then I'd get way over on the side of 'em so my mother wouldn't see me. But she caught me! She said, you're not supposed to ride a cow, you're supposed to milk 'em! Ha ha. Sometimes I would get mad and take off from hoin' corn and buddy he wouldn't let me have nothing to eat till I went to work.

So I had to work the next day and boy I was glad to have something to eat. I didn't walk from work anymore. That's why I say: I STAYED in trouble!

I gotta get that helmet on. You're not supposed to work without a helmet. Yeah, need to wear this, especially cuttin' down. Well, I'm supposed to wear it when I'm runnin' the skidder too. I got one with a mask with a shield on it with the ear muffs course I'm hard of hearing now so...I been around too much noise. I didn't know what was going on, like on the head saw. I mean, I ran it for a long time. And boy that noise, well you don't pay attention to it and, I forget what saw I had – Lombard or Homola I think it was – and I had that boy helping me in the woods and he said, Dominick that thing is too loud. And I got to listen to it, I said, you know, you're right. So I quit usin' it. But that boy got killed in the woods didn't he? Somebody got killed here in the woods up in Upshur County. He was twenty-four years old. He cut one tree down and I think it hit another one and it fell on him or something 'ere. Twenty-four years old. Ehh, it's dangerous to work in the woods. You gotta be...

Down 'ere Harman 'ere, I didn't have my winch with me, I got my saw caught, so I went to cut that log off, and about the time I got it cut off, it was slick that day, and I slid underneath that log and it rolled over on me. It had both my feet caught and my head was like 'at. Well, didn't break a bone though! I was lucky. The fire department, they had to come out – that log musta been that big – they had to come there and raise that log off of me. I couldn't move. Only thing I could move was this hand here. Ehh, I try to be careful from then on. I got in a hurry. It was wet and it was real steep and when that saw got caught my feet went like that. Ha ha! Yeah, so I try to be careful.

Okay, I'm gonna see if I can get that saw going. I might have to get you to crank on it here.

Be careful, make sure the brake's on.

ABOVE: The mischevious Dominick Ricotilli, 81 year-old timber cutter in Barbour County, doing what he loves: clambering over a pile of tulip poplars at the landing as only a man with poor hearing, two replaced knees, one working eye, one sound arm, and a hearty sense of humor can.

COVER: Amanda Pitzer, Director of Friends of the Cheat in Preston County, looking out over Fascination Alley on the Cheat River. For more on Amanda and her work there, see the story on pg. 36.
